For Two Generations

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

A LITTLE SHOP-GIRL.

"She's an old darling," said Grace Craxall, "and I mean to help her all I can. I've got a beautiful recipe for chocolate eclairs, and on Friday evening I am going there to make up all that I can, so that the school children will buy them on Saturday. I know how to make cinnamon apple tarts, too, and lemon drops and cocoanut balls."

"Grace, I do believe you have taken leave of your senses," said Medora May. "One would think it was disgrace enough for Aunt Deborah—our own mother's sister—to open a horrid little huckster shop without our mixing ourselves up in the affair."

"But Aunt Debby must live, you know," said Grace, who was perched, kitten-fashion, on the window-sill, feeding the canary with bits of sparkling white sugar. "And Cousin Nixon couldn't keep her any longer, and her eyes are not strong enough for fine needlework, and her education has not fitted her to be a teacher, and her poor old rheumatic bones keep her from going behind a counter or entering a factory. I suppose you wouldn't be willing to have her come and live with you?"

"I!" cried Medora. "Do you suppose I want to proclaim to the whole town that I have such a dilapidated old relation as that?"

"I would take her quick enough," said Grace, "if I didn't board with Mrs. Howitt, and share the little up-stairs back room with the two children. Just wait until I marry some rich man," she added, with a saucy uplifting of her auburn brows, "and then see if I don't furnish up a stately apartment for Aunt Debby?"

"Don't talk nonsense," said Medora acidly. "It's very likely, isn't it, that a factory girl like you is going to marry a rich man?"

Grace Craxall laughed merrily. All through life she and her cousin, Medora May, had agreed to differ on most points. Grace seeing no other career before her mind, on the death of her last surviving parent, cheerfully entered a factory, while Medora, taking her stand on the platform of a false gentility, had done fine sewing and silk embroidery on the sly to support herself, putting on all the airs of a young lady of fashion the while. And now Aunt Deborah May, to the infinite disgust of her aristocratically inclined niece, had actually opened a little low-windowed shop in a shady street just out of the main thoroughfare, and, as Medora despairingly expressed it, "gone into trade!"

For Aunt Debby, in her bewildered loneliness, had scarcely known what to do until Grace Craxall came to the rescue with her hopeful courage and straightforward common-sense.

"I only wish it wasn't sinful to take a dose of laudanum and put myself out of the way,' sighed the poor old lady.

"Now, Aunt Debby, that doesn't sound a bit like you,' said Grace cheerfully.

"But what am I to do?' said Aunt Deborah.

"What can you do?" said Grace.

"I don't know as I am good for anything,' said the old lady with a quiet tear or two, "except to help around the house, and I ain't strong enough for regular hired help. Your uncle always used to say I was a master-hand at making bread."

"Then make it,' brightly interrupted Grace.

"Eh?" said Aunt Debby.

"There's a nice little store to let on Bay Street,' went on Grace, "for ten dollars a month.'

"But I haven't got ten dollars a month,' feebly interrupted Aunt Debby.

"I'll lend it to you,' said Grace, "out of the wages I have saved, And there's a pretty bed-room at the back of the shop, and a clean dry basement under it, where you can bake your bread. I know, for the sister of the lady where I board is looking for dress-making rooms, and I heard her speaking about it.'

"Do you mean to open a bakery?' said bewildered Aunt Debby.

"Not exactly that,' explained Grace. "But if Mrs. Howitt, or Mrs. Taylor, or any of the ladies around here could get real home-made bread, such as you make, do you suppose they would put up with the sour stuff they get at the baker shops! And you could easily get up a reputation on your raisin cakes, and fried crullers, and New England pumpkin pies. Now couldn't you?'

The old lady brightened up a little.

"I used to be pretty good at cooking,' said she. "And if you think I could support myself so—

"I am sure of it!" cried cheerful Grace. "And I'll go there with you this very day to look at the place, and will engage it for three months on trial. And I can paint you a sign to put over your door, "Home-made Bread by Mrs. Deborah May!' And I'll hem you some curtains and arrange the shelves in the low window! I almost wish I was going to be your shop-girl,' she added merrily. "But I can help you in the evening, you know!'

Grace Craxall's prophecies proved correct. Aunt Debby's delicious home-made bread, whiter than powdered lilies, sweet as ambrosia, soon acquired a reputation, and the old lady could scarcely [illegible] People came half a dozen blocks to buy the yellow pumpkin pies and delicious apple tarts; children brought their hoarded pennies to invest in chocolate sweet-meats, vanilla caramels, and cream cakes with puffy shells and delicious centres of sweetness. The little money-drawer grew fat with coins, and Aunt Debby's dim eyes grew bright and hopeful again.

And one day Mr. Herbert Valance, walking by with Medora May, stopped and looked in.

"Isn't that your cousin Grace,' said he, 'behind the counter?"

Medora turned crimson with vexation.

"My cousin Grace?' she said. "No, indeed! We are not—in trade.'

What possessed her to utter this deliberate falsehood Medora could not afterward have told. Partly the sting of false shame, partly a disinclination for Mr. Herbert Valance to know that her relations were, to use her expression, 'not ladies and gentlemen.'

Mr. Valance looked up at the sign over the door.

'The name is May,' he remarked indifferently.

'Yes,' said Medora, angry at herself blushing so deeply, 'but we are no relation.'

Mr. Valance thought over the matter; he afterward met Miss May at a party given by a friend, where pretty Grace Craxall was also present; he had taken rather a fancy to the blue eyes and delicate blonde beauty of the former. Valance Hall, on the hill just out of the city, was solitary enough, now that his sisters had all married and gone away, and perhaps a man might find a less attractive and graceful wife than Medora May. But he could not be mistaken, he thought, in Grace Craxall's identity.

And so the next evening, about the same time, he sauntered into the shop.

Grace was behind the daintily-clean little counter, taking some newly-baked maple caramels off the pan. She looked up with a smile.

'Good-evening, Mr. Valance,' said she.

'So,' he thought, 'I wasn't mistaken after all. And the little blue eyed seraph is mortal enough to tell a lie in spite of her angelic appearance!'

But he looked serenely at Grace. 'I didn't know you were in trade,' said he.

'Didn't you? Well,' retorted Grace, 'I am my Aunt Deborah's shop-girl at present. I always come here in the evenings to help her, because,' she added, with a sweet shade of seriousness coming over her face, 'aunt was old and poor, and she didn't quite know how to maintain herself in independence; and, unfortunately, my wages at the factory are not enough for us both. So I advised her to open this business, and she did, and she's doing well; and she bakes the most delicious bread and pies you ever ate, so,' with a saucy twinkle under her eyelashes, 'if you know of any customers, will you please recommend our firm?'

'To be sure I shall,' he answered in the same spirit. 'And I am very glad, Miss Craxall, to see that you are not ashamed of being a working-girl.'

'Of course I am not,' said Grace. 'Why should I be.'

'But your cousin Medora is.'

Grace gave a little shrug of her shoulders.

'Very likely,' said she. 'Medora and I differ in many things.'

Mr. Valance bought a pound of caramels, and went away.

'She is a beauty,' he said to himself. 'And she is a sensible beauty into the bargain. One of those rare creatures in our country, a thoroughly well-balanced girl.'

He must have been very well pleased with his purchase, for he came again the next evening, just in time to walk home with Grace Craxall. And they talked over Aunt Deborah's affairs, and concluded, as flour was low just then, it would be a favorable opportunity for the old lady to lay in her winter stock through Mr. Valance, who was acquainted with one of the great New York grain merchants.

Only a few weeks had elapsed when Medora May was electrified to learn that her cousin Grace was engaged.

'To some master baker or journeyman confectioner, I suppose,' she said contemptuously.

'No,' said Grace, with eyes roguishly sparkling, 'to Mr. Herbert Valance.'

'I—don't—believe—it,' said Medora, growing red, then pale.

'But it's really so,' said Grace. 'And we are to be married in three months. And Aunt Debby is to come to the hall and live with me as soon as she can dispose of her business to advantage. And, dear Medora, I hope you will often come and visit me there.'

Medora May did not answer. She could not. But in her secret heart she recognized how infinitely more successful in life's lists had been Grace's true, frank honesty, than her own subtle and devious course.

Like many another, however, the lesson had come to her too late.

THE VIRGINIUS PRISONERS.

The Place Where They Were Shot—Saved by a British Gunboat.

[Cuba Cor. New York Times.]

One of the sights of Santiago is the spot where some of the Virginius prisoners were shot. It is a six-feet high wall in front of the slaughter-house. The men were stood up in line, with their faces to the wall and their backs to the soldiers, and murdered. The story they tell there of the rescue of the remainder of the prisoners is an interesting one. Americans and Englishmen in Santiago tell the story; the natives don't tell it, for obvious reasons. The government, so the story goes, had interdicted the sending of any message over the cable concerning the killing of these prisoners. But there was an English boy in the telegraph office, learning the business, and he watched his chance when the operator was out, and standing unconcernedly with his back to the key, while the office was guarded by Spanish soldiers, he put his hands behind him and managed to send over to Jamaica this startling message:

"There's the devil to pay in Santiago. They're buthering men of all nations."

You must imagine how such a message was received in Jamaica; how the operator read it and reread it and wondered whether it was a hoax, and read it again and then sent it up to the governor. The governor perhaps had had experience with the Spaniards before, for he sent the message without delay to the commander of a British gunboat that lay in Kingston harbor, and the commander had faith enough in it to put on all steam and point his bow for Santiago. For if men of all nations were being butchered there must be Englishmen among them. Next morning the British gunboat lay in Santiago harbor, and how glad those poor prisoners must have been to see her there, Americans as well as English.

The commander sent a messenger ashore to learn what was going on, but he came back without any information. Rifle shots were frequently heard, and he sent one of his principal officers to see the commandant of the Spanish troops to inquire whether any British subjects were in trouble, and the commandant sent him back an impudent reply, saying that he had just shot one batch of prisoners and intended to shoot another lot within an hour, and that it was none of his business. Then the British commander sent a message ashore that the Spanish general might possibly have thought uncivil. It was to the effect that if he heard another shot fired until he had assurances that no British subjects were being murdered he would open fire on the city. This did the business, and the shooting stopped. The gunboat staid long enough to see that the remaining prisoners had at least fair play, and thus saved a good many lives.

This is not my story, remember; I merely give it as I heard it. I was not there at the time. But it's a neat little story, and I couldn't help telling it.

Chinese Luncheon.

[Isabelle Williamson.]

We adjourned to the apartments of the younger ladies, and had luncheon of confections, fruit, pastry, salad and tea. Only the old Tai Tai (or lady) ate with me. The young wives and daughters ate afterward. The divan on which we sat, and on which was placed a small dining table, was covered with a magnificent wadded quilt. The center piece was yellow silk, with crimson brocade pattern, richly mixed with gold. The opposite divan was covered with a quilt of greater beauty—white satin embroidered in pink and gold and green. While at luncheon the whole household of women came in and partook of melon seeds and sweetmeats. Some of the nieces of the old Tai Tai came in with the children. There were many very fine-looking women among them.

Just at sunset dinner was served. None but the old Tai Tai and I dined, although there was ample provision for the thirty or forty women and girls who sat round about the room talking and amusing the little ones. The viands were deliciously cooked, and as course after course was sent in I became quite bewildered. The decorations on the various dishes were highly artistic. When dinner was ended two beautifully lacquered basins were brought in, with hot water and a small napkin, which the lady wrung out and handed to me.

The Chinese on Epilepsy.

[Foreign Letter.]

The Chinese regard an attack of epilepsy as the occupancy of a man's body by the spirit of an animal, usually a pig or a sheep. They try to keep such spirit by stuffing the patient's mouth with grass, for if it leaves before the return of the man's own spirit—which must be absent during the fit—the man will die.

Gifts to Colleges.

[Boston Commonwealth.]

There are twenty persons who gifts to colleges aggregate over $20,000,000. Three of these rich men—Stephen Girard, John Hopkins and Asa Packer—gave over $14,000,000. Henry F. Durant gave to Wellesley college about $1,000,000.

SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE.

E. E. FRANCK - - - - - - - - - - - EDITOR

SONOMA, NOVEMBER 21, 1885.

DIED AS HE LIVED.

Wm. Sharon, one of the richest men on the Pacific Coast, died in his rooms at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, last Friday. He left a colossal estate, variously estimated to be worth between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000. This vast sum had been accumulated in less than two decades and was mainly amassed through shrewd stock deals and other schemes which enticed men with moderate fortunes into the trap set for them by the dead millionaire. Sharon was the wrecker of other men's fortunes. The false beacon light which he caused to be set up stranded many a man with a moderate fortune on the hidden shoals of an uncertain financial shore to which he had treacherously lured them. Thus, by absorbing the small fortunes of many, was he enabled to become a modern Crœsus. The riches he acquired would have become the envy of the King of Lydia himself did he but live in these days.

Acquisitiveness and selfishness were two of the principle combinations which went to make up the man, and these largely developed, were characteristic of him to the last. Unlike the noble-hearted Stanford, our generous Flood and a host of others of California's rich men, it is not on record that the dead millionaire ever contributed any portion of his vast estate toward charitable or educational purposes. He grasped his hoarded millions with a miserly clutch and did not release his hold on them till Death laid his bony hand on him and claimed him for his own.

It now looks as though Prewitt, the ringleader of the band of assassins who took the life of Dr. Powers in San Benito county, is to receive his just deserts. One of the participants in this cruel and wanton murder, Richard Alexander, has turned State's evidence, and given the whole proceedings away at the preliminary examination of a number of men charged with being implicated in the crime. It appears from his confession that Prewitt, the ringleader, waylaid and shot Powers, and subsequently the gang was got together, the body was dragged to a convenient tree and suspended to the branches of the same to make it appear as if their victim had been lynched by a popular uprising. If justice be meted out to Prewitt and those implicated with him, he will surely be hanged and his confederates sent to the penitentiary for life.

Reil, the half-breed rebel, was executed last Monday, at Regina, N. W. T. The Dominion Government, has surprised the world by this step, as the people of all civilized countries had looked to a commutation of his sentence up to within a few days of his taking off. Reil did not deserve hanging any more than did the Revolutionary patriots of our own country. He was the leader of a party of insurgents who had a political mission to fill. The fortunes of war went against him, and through the stupidity of the Domininion Government his life has paid the forfeit. His name will be handed down to future generations in his own country as a martyr, and his execution will bring no disgrace upon his surviving relations and their progeny.

Senator Stanford's munificent endowment of $20,000,000 for the founding of a University at Palo Alto stands without a parallel. It is the largest sum ever given by any individual in this or any other country for educational purposes. Leland Stanford's purse has always been open to the needy and distressed, as thousands well know in the State, and this last act of his shows him to be one of the greatest philanthropist's of the age.

Charles H. Chamberlain, for many years Receiver of the Land Office in San Francisco, turned over his books to the newly-appointed Receiver, J. W. Leigh, last Thursday.

The number of families burned out by the Galveston, Texas, fire last week numbered 1,000. Great distress prevails among the poorer class of people burned out.

LOUISIANA LOTTERY SWINDLE.

Although there is a law on our statute books prohibiting newspapers from publishing lottery advertisements, the law is being violated, by at least one-half the papers published in the State. These advertisements are all the more injurious from the fact that they are inserted in the news or editorial columns of a newspaper. They are paid for by a San Francisco advertising bureau who are acting as agents for the manager of the Louisiana Lottery. The newspaper publisher who gives place in his columns to these reading notices of the Louisiana Lottery is not only guilty of violating the law, but also of aiding and abetting one of the most gigantic swindles of the age. If any proof is needed to show that this lottery is a fraud and bare-faced swindle it certainly can be furnished by a case which came up recently in San Francisco, an account of which we take from an exchange:

A party by the name of Beangarden brought an action to recover $15,000, being one-tenth of the capital prize in the semi-annual drawing of December 18, 1883, of the Louisiana State Lottery. The plaintiff alleges that he bought the one-tenth coupon of No. 7,507, which won the capital prize. He testified that after the purchase, and before he had seen the announcement of the drawing, the person from whom he had bought the ticket came to him, said the ticket had drawn nothing, and recovered possession of the coupon by a trick, pretending to throw it into the fire. A large number of witnesses testified that they had seen the coupon No. 7,507 in the possession of the plaintiff prior to the drawing.

Counsel for the plaintiff offered in evidence an official list of the drawing, showing that No. 7,507 won the capital prize of $150,000, and the further announcement that "portion of this ticket was sold in San Francisco."

The defendant claimed that the ticket had never been sold and had never been in this State. In support of this theory, there was produced a deposition of Maximilian A. Dauphin, the manager of the lottery, in which he testifies: "Ticket No. 7,507 was issued as a whole, made up of two undivided coupons, each representing one-half, which ticket is still in our possession, canceled and unsold."

By the above it will be seen that although ticket No. 7,507 was published as drawing the capital prize, Dauphin, the manager, swears it had never been sold. The large winnings published every month by a number of our contemporaries are myths. To be sure the holders of tickets are allowed to win a small sum now and then to induce them and their friends to invest again, but where one dollar is won a thousand is lost.

There has always been and there will always be a certain number of suckers in this world and a lottery ticket is just the kind of bait that catches them.

THE VITICULTURISTS.

The State Board of Viticulturial Commissioners met in San Francisco last Saturday, and among other business transacted, was the drawing up of a paper, which will be presented to our Congressional delegation. It points out for them the legislation necessary for the protection and fostering of the wine, brandy and raisin interest. These products will soon take first rank in this State, hence, the necessity of wise laws looking to the advancement of these growing industries. Following is the paper:

First—That the import duty on all fermented drinks be rated according to alcoholic strength.

Second—That pure grape spirits may be used by our winemakers, in fortifying sweet wines to preserve them, without tax, this privilege not to be extended to the use of other spirits. Wines so fortified not to exceed 22 per cent of alcohol.

Third—That the internal revenue tax on spirits should be based on taxation on consumption, not on production; that if any limit be placed on the time for which brandy may be kept in bond, it be so extended as to give producers ample time after their goods are fully matured to seek purchasers; and that it is the duty of the Government to protect customers against unwholesome new spirits by granting a rebate of at least 10 per cent on the tax for each year, not exceeding five, that brandy is kept in bond.

Fourth—That further facilities be granted in bond for refilling packages under distillers' stamps.

Fifth—That the existing law providing for the taxation of spurious and adulterated wines shall be enforced, or, if found defective, shall be amended so as to prove an effective protection to consumers against ruinous competition. The wine producers claim that Congress legislates to foster their industries, but does not intend to foster fraud and adulteration. The Internal Revenue Department should be preserved, not only as a source of income to the Government, but also as a means of discovering and exposing fraud and adulteration.

Sixth—That an effective law should be passed so as to enable consumers to select and identify pure wines and brandies, and avoid compounds which they do not intend to purchase.

Seventh—That the tariff on raisins should be raised, in accordance with the wishes of producers, expressed at the Fresno Convention, June 12, 1884.

PAY AS YOU GO.

The importance of "paying as you go" was never a more vital necessity than the present time. The temporary depression in business and scarcity of money render it almost a necessity to do a cash business, as nearly as possible, in current exchange; especially is it a matter of business to pay all small bills, if the merchants are to be protected and give the same bargains as before. The failure of one man to pay involves numerous other disappointments and obligations upon the strength of your promise to settle. If you are not really positive you can meet a debt at a certain time don't make any promises. Promises form a leading factor in the medium of exchange. There are various reasons assigned as to the cause of the general embarassment in business, none of which we need mention. What demands our attention is the best means of getting out of it. It is very uncharitable to overtax the confidence of a friend, thus making him liable to bankruptcy any day. It is always much easier to pay as you go, and then you appreciate what you pay for. Anything paid for after full benefit has been received from it seems like sinking money, or just giving it away. Small debts paid just now will go a long way toward liquidating the large ones; and if you want to contribute your mites towards bringing about a revival in business, and the restoration of better times, PAY AS YOU GO!—Exchange.

The Legislature of Oregon has elected J. H. Mitchell, Republican, United States Senator. He received the votes of seventeen Democratic and thirty-eight Republican members. He is pledged to support Cleveland's administration.

The books of the City Tax Collector were closed last Monday evening at 6 o'clock, and all taxes unpaid at that time are now delinquent. The total tax levy for the city amounted to $1,205 02. Of this amount $1,112 71 was paid over to the Collector, leaving $92 31 as delinquent. There are 186 tax-payers within the city limits. Of these 158 have settled and 28 have omitted to do so. The amounts owing by these twenty-eight persons vary from 80 cents to $16.

We have received from George Stinson & Co., of Portland, Maine, the well-known Art Publishers, a magnificent, full length, steel engraving of Gen. Grant. It is after Anderson's celebrated photograph, which was made while the general was still in full vigor, and represents him in his sturdy, manly strength, as the people wish to remember him. It is, undoubtedly, the best portrait ever made of the General. Messrs. Stinson & Co. are in need of agents for several important, popular, new publications, and offer inducements that should be heeded by those in need of profitable work; those who write to them will receive, free, full particulars.

A Peculiar Find.

Captain H. E. Boyes, in clearing out one of the hot springs on his place, a few miles from town, one day this week, found in the debris underneath the boarding, which had been laid at the bottom of the spring many years ago by a former owner, a soup dish, an old red clay pipe, a black bottle and, singular to relate, a tress of light golden hair about eighteen inches long. It is easy to account for the presence of all these articles except the latter. The soup dish, bottle and pipe may have been accidentally dropped into the spring by some of the earlier settlers in our valley. But how came this tress of some fair woman's hair at the bottom of the spring is what is puzzling the Captain and his family.

This spring, we are informed, has quite a local reputation. Many years before the advent of the white man on this coast, Indian tradition has it that the spring was visited by the aboriginees from far and near, so famous had its medicinal properties become to the untutored savage. At a later date the sick and crippled of the Mexican population flocked to this spring for relief and many were the wonderful cures effected which tradition has handed down.

An analysis of the water taken from this hot spring shows it to be highly impregnated with sulphur, magnesia and iron, and a thermometer immersed for a few seconds in the same upon being drawn out registered 98 degrees. It is the intention of Captain Boyes to open up this spring to the public at no distant day. When this is done the spring will no doubt become as famous for its curative properties among the people of the present day as it was to the Indian tribes who made these hills and valleys their home in times long past.

Accident.

Wm. Parish met with quite a serious accident on Friday afternoon of last week. He was engaged in repairing a culvert on the Santa Rosa road between Appleton's and Burns', a few miles from town, and having occasion to leave his team standing untied for a few minutes they became frightened at some passing school children and started to run away. Mr. Parish made a rush for the horses heads and grasping them by the bits sought to stop them. He was thrown to the ground with great violence, the horses and wagon passing over his prostrate form, which was in a measure protected by a narrow and deep ditch into which he was thrown. This undoubtedly saved his life. As it was, his left shoulder was dislocated, and he was otherwise cut up and severely bruised. He was picked up and brought to town by two gentlemen passing in a buggy and Dr. Lawrence summoned, who reduced the dislocation.

The Rain.

The rain which again set in last Sunday continued to fall almost incessantly up to Thursday morning. The wind veered around to the north-west in the afternoon of that day and the prospects are now good for clear weather. Enough rain has fallen to thoroughly saturate the soil and what is now wanted is a few weeks of dry, warm weather. If this be vouchsafed to the farmer and stockman, the former will be enabled to plow and seed his land and the latter's stock will wax fat on the grass that is already covering the hillsides with a mantle of green. The outlook for the agriculturist and stockman in the Sonoma Valley never looked brighter in the month of November.

COMPENSATION.

THE NATURAL LAW THEREOF EXEMPLIFIED.

Munificent Gifts by Senator Stanford and Wife.

Future Generations of California the Beneficiaries.

ONE OF THE PUBLIC BENEFITS OF CO-OPERATION OF CAPITAL AND LABOR.

The natural and immutable law of compensation has been beautifully and munificently illustrated by the acts of Senator Leland Stanford and his wife, Jane Lathrop Stanford, in devising the scheme, but recently made known to the public in detail, for the establishment of the "Leland Stanford, Jr., University" and the princely donation made jointly by them for the endowment thereof. The grant consists of the Gridley farm, lying in Butte county, Cal., consisting of 18,255.98 acres of rich land in a high state of cultivation, and other tracts in the same county, also improved, aggregating 3,541.21 acres; the Vina Rancho, which lies part in Tehama county and part in Butte, containing 53,291.22 acres, and the Palo Alto farm of 5,991.55 acres, lying part in San Mateo and part in Santa Clara counties, amounting in the aggregate to 81,091.96 acres of choice land, highly improved, planted in choicest varieties of trees, vines, meadow grasses, with the finest and most appropriate modern buildings, substantially fenced, and furnished with improved tools, implements, machinery, and stocked with blooded horses, cattle and other domestic animals, the value of which is roughly estimated at $5,000,000, the grant of which, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a University of the highest order for the education of the youth of this State, on the Palo Alto farm, was signed by Leland Stanford and Jane Lathrop Stanford, on the 11th day of November, 1885. The trustees named in the deed are Lorenzo Sawyer, James McM. Shafter, Chas. Goodall, Alfred L. Tubbs, Francis A. Spencer, Henry Vrooman, Charles F. Crocker, Timothy Hopkins, Henry L. Dodge, Irving M. Scott, William Ashburner, H. W. Harkness, Josiah Stanford, Horace Davis, John F. Miller, John Boggs, T. B. McFarland, Isaac S. Belcher, John Q. Brown, George E. Gray, N. W. Spaulding, of California; Mathew P. Deady of Oregon, William M. Stewart of Nevada, and Stephen J. Field, a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. All were present except Senator Miller, James McM. Shafter, Judge Deady and Judge Field, and signed the deed in acknowledgment of the trust.

The grantors becoming childless by the death of their son, Leland Stanford, Jr., intend the University as a perpetual monument to the memory of their deceased son, who foreshadowed it in his lifetime in his day dreams of future usefulness in promoting the happiness, welfare and greatness of the people of his native State. And the law of "compensation" is further exemplified by the endowment necessarily becoming an everlasting monument to the memories of the whole-souled doners, Governor Stanford and Jane Lathrop Stanford, and the trustees named in the deed as well.

For twenty years past the name of Leland Stanford has been bandied from mouth to mouth and from the press of the coast as the head of a "soulless corporation," an oppressor of the people; a land-grabber and aristocrat, taxing the labor and products of the country to the fullest extent that could be extracted from them, and characterizing him and his compeers and colleagues in the great public enterprises which they have had in hand and managed successfully, public enemies. But this crowning act of Stanford's life, even though his deeds for the future good and true greatness of the leading State of the Pacific Coast should cease with this act, ought to endear the Senator and his wife forever in the hearts of all Californians, that Nature's immutable law of recompense or compensation shall be fully carried out. And it would be meet also that, while Leland Stanford and Jane Lathrop Stanford live, Californians by way of aiding in carrying out Nature's laws should never be niggardly in according honors to these benefactors of the present and future generations.

The Concert and Fair.

The Concert and Fair of the Congregational Church, which was to have taken place on the 17th and 18th instants, on account of the inclemency of the weather was postponed till Thursday and Friday evenings. On the former evening a large number of our people were present and expressed themseves as highly pleased with the evening's entertainment.

The first number was an insrumental duet by the Misses Hope and Zoe Clark. These young ladies sustained their well-earned reputation as pianoforte players and were heartily applauded.

The second number, a vocal solo, "Kate's Letter," was excellently rendered by Sophie Wilson.

The third number was a recitation entitled, "Boys' Rights," by Joe Golden. Joe, although a very small boy, went through his piece like an old stager and received a round of applause.

The fourth number was a chorus by the children of the Congregational Sunday School. They showed thorough training and made the number one of the most pleasing of the evening, as was evidenced by the applause they received.

Then followed the fifth number, a recitation entitled, "Mamma's Help," by Nellie Sackett.

The sixth and seventh numbers consisted of a pantomime, "Old Robin Gray," and singing by a number of little girls.

The eighth number was a recitation by little Eddie Morris, entitled "Schkate." This was one of the most comic recitations that we have ever listened to. Master Eddie received a rousing encore.

The ninth number was a vocal solo, "Grandma's Advice" by Inez McTaggart, a pretty little Miss of seven summers. For one so young she exhibited more than ordinary vocal talent and was loudly applauded.

Then came a recitation, "The Handsome Girl in a Crowded Car," by Florence Linehan. This was well recited and heartily applauded.

The eleventh number, a vocal duet, "No Sir," was rendered in a remarkable fine style by Oscar and Bertha Campbell, who were dressed in very pretty costumes. They responded to an encore by singing the last verse of the song.

The twelfth number, recitation, "The Life Boat," was given by Miss Lottie Morris, who was followed by a "Fairy Dance," by four little Misses, which ended the program for the evening.

It is not often that an audience is so well entertained by children as was the one congregated in Union Hall last Thursday evening, and those having the entertainment in charge deserve credit for the admirable manner in which every thing passed off.

HEALDSBURG ITEMS.

[Enterprise.]

Miss Nannie Jones, who met with a serious accident at Windsor, a short time since, breathed her last on Monday, the 8th inst.

On Thursday noon, City Treasurer W. P. White opened bids for bonds of Healdsburg, the highest and best bidders being Sutro & Co., of San Francisco. They were duly declared the purchasers at 101¼ and accrued interest.

Reports from the head of Dry Creek indicate finer feed than is usual at this time of year. Owing to the short grass last Fall some sheep will fail to recuperate sufficiently to withstand the cold storms that will soon be upon us and sheep men anticipate considerable loss unless the rain holds off for a considerable period.

CLOVERDALE CLIPPINGS.

[Reveille.]

A flock of wild geese becoming bewildered in the rain storm of last Friday night, alighted on Main street, near the Catholic church.

Large numbers of dead sheep are to be seen on the river bar near town, which have fallen victims to a couple of dogs, said to belong to parties residing in this place. Some one will have to pay a big bill of damages before long.

The late copious rains have enriched the farmers. The short crops and the pinching times of the past season are almost forgotten in the general rejoicing, and the past seems like a hideous nightmare.

The litigation over the Geysers has been brought to a close. Dr. Powers, of Marysville, who recently purchased the interest of Mrs. Pollack, one day last week also purchased the interest of the contestant, Mr. Chapman. A clear title is now held by Dr. Powers, who has leased the property to Dr. Stoddart, of San Francisco, for a term of five years.

Spontaneous Combustion.

[Petaluma Courier.]

Last Saturday night the coal in the shed in the rear of Bowles & Son's steam flouring mills was discovered on fire and the alarm bell summoned the firemen. With the assistance of several men in shoveling and turning over the coal, with a stream of water playing upon it nearly all the time, the fire was soon put out and the coal cooled off. The fire was no doubt the result of spontaneous combustion.

SANTA ROSA NEWS.

[Daily Democrat.]

A soap factory has been established in Santa Rosa.

James O. Rue received his commission, Tuesday, for United States Gauger of this district.

The case of P. L. Etheridge, the Guerneville firebug, was set for trial Wednesday, but on motion of defendant's counsel the case was postponed for two weeks.

Several sportsmen in Santa Rosa, who have depended for a number of years for a livelihood by hunting quail for the market, have been compelled to relinquish that business this season. It is said that quail exist in large numbers this year, but for some unexplained reason have taken up their abode in the brushy hills which are difficult of access.

James Morrow, Sr., a pioneer merchant and a highly respected citizen, died at his residence on Second street in this city at 1 P. M., on Monday, at the advanced age of nearly 83 years. He was born in New Jersey, on the 29th day of January, 1803.

Sam Lachman of the firm of Lachman & Jacobi, San Francisco, was in Santa Rosa yesterday. He has just purchased the Quitzow cellar at Healdsburg, containing some 60,000 gallons of wine. We did not succeed in getting the price paid for this cellar.

A Mr. Henley, while chopping wood on a ranch of Mr. Page's, near Petaluma, met with a painful accident last Monday. As the tree fell a large limb was broken off and flew some thirty feet to where he was standing, knocking him down and breaking his thigh bone. He is at present in the County Hospital and is gradually improving.

We have been informed that an effort will be made to get up a subscription to remove the remains of the late Samuel Potter, formerly Sheriff of this county, and reinter them in some cemetery, and mark the spot with a suitable headstone. We would most heartily unite in any movement having this end in view. Mr. Potter had many friends in this county who would doubtless cheerfully subscribe to remove his remains, and mark his resting place, if an organized effort were made to accomplish it.

Walter W. Conley was sentenced to thirty days in the County Jail, last Saturday, in Petaluma, and was brought to Santa Rosa on Sunday. This is not the first time the defendant has laid violent hands on his wife, but on this occasion he used more violence than on any previous occasion, choking and slapping her for some time. She said that she refused to have him arrested before out of consideration for the family, but things had come to such a pass that forbearance ceased to be a virtue. In sentencing the prisoner the Judge said it was very light, but if he was ever arraigned before him again he would give him the full extent of the law.

Herman Bier, a German 20 years of age, while engaged in driving piles for the Geyserville bridge, on Monday, had his left leg broken about eight inches below the knee and also at the ankle joint. The accident was caused by one of the piles which was being driven slipping from its position and striking him on the leg. The sufferer was brought to Santa Rosa on the afternoon train, Thursday, and his leg was set at the County Hospital, where he will remain until he has entirely recovered. The first day after the accident his sufferings were very great, but on Tuesday evening he was resting easily.

VITALIS.

[Roxana L. Gordon in Austin Sun.]

Times change; the two go divers ways—
The evening shades increase,
On him, grown old in fame and praise,
On her in household peace.
The echo of the false, sweet words
He sang so long ago
Has passed as pass the summer birds
Before the winter's snow,
But as to-night the angel's hand
Loosens the silver cord,
And calls her to that other land
Of love's supreme reward,
She hears but one round, silent long,
A whisper soft and low,
The echo of the false sweet song
He sang so long ago.

A CELESTIAL BURIAL.

A Salt Lake Chinaman Interred with the Ceremony of His Native Land.

[Salt Lake Herald.]

About 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon the citizens in the neighborhood of the precincts of Plum valley were enlivened by the strains of music by the fireman's band, under the leadership of Professor Cushing. They were discoursing airs on the occasion of the funeral services of one Chin Choo, an aged Chinaman who had died and who was about to be laid away by his fellow heathens in good style. Shortly after the strains of music had died away the procession came down into Second South, filed right to Main street, up a block and east and north to the southeast corner of the city cemetery.

In the lead of the procession were some of the dignitaries of the Tse Yi company in carriages, then tramped a number of flag-bearers, with colors of red, white, black, green, yellow and pink, variously distributed and in all manners of jagged and unseemly shapes. The hearse, with a heathen in the seat with the driver, distributing slips of paper "to keep away the devil;" then a number of Chinese on foot, and bringing up the rear was a wagon containing a Chinese band of three instruments, which played an incessant, rattle, racket and din from the starting point to the graveyard.

Arrived at the cemetery, the ceremonies were gone through with in true Oriental style, and to many who witnessed them were amusing, nonsensical, and ridiculous; yet they were observed an carried on with all the seriousness and solemnity imaginable by the penny colored mourners. The customary roast pig, joss paper and burning candles were among the accessories, and the way in which they were manipulated was enough to make the first mentioned laugh.

A bottle of corn juice, or juice of a stimulating nature—probably bug juice—was passed around, and the smacking lips and blinking eyes told the lookers on that it was a relish; slices and chunks of the brown porker and last spring's rooster were cast with lavish hand into the yawning gulf which already held the corpse of Chin Choo. A disposition was also made of the "dear departed's" loose change, clothing and other minor et ceteras, when the earth was piled in and the ceremony of the burial was at an end. A large number of citizens were attracted by the novelty of the proceeding.

The Weird Bird of the South Atlantic.

[Detroit Free Press.]

As the craft bowls along in the south Atlantic a new world seems to open upon the voyager. The constellation of the Southern Cross has scarcely become familiar to him before he begins to see animal, or rather bird, life altogether new to him. One of the greatest novelties of this kind that can ever impress itself upon the mind of man is the albatross.

Some morning the lounger will reach the deck and, casting his eye in the wake of the ship to judge her speed, will see a speck just above the horizon far astern. Growing larger and larger as it approaches, it finally develops into a gigantic bird, and the old sailor, conning the helm, will gruffly suggest the fact that it is proper for the tyro to wet his first introduction to an albatross. There is something inexpressibly weird about the bird itself, as well as in its manner of flight, and it is matter of little wonder to those who have seen it, that a brain such as Coleridge's should have hit upon it for the text of his Lay of the Ancient Mariner.

Without a beat of wing, without motion of the body, the bird will, by long, easy-going tacks, swoop up from astern until it gets within easy watching distance from the ship it chooses to follow. It will then "lay to" at that respectful distance and after taking thorough stock of the stranger that has invaded its domain will, with no apparent effort, swoop past the ship to port or starboard, as the case may be, pass it by several cable lengths and then, laying to on the opposite hand to its advance, allow the ship to pass it, and will then once more take up its post as rear guard of the procession. Nothing can be more ghost-like than the action of the albatross in thus passing or being passed.

Japanese in London Opera.

[London Truth.]

During the rehearsals of Gilbert & Sullivan's new operetta, a Japanese dancer and a Japanese tea girl from the "Village" at Knightsbridge gave their services, and to this it is, no doubt, due that both actors and actresses are so very Japanny. The girl knows only two words of English, "Sixpence, please," this being the price of a cup of tea, but she was an apt instructress. I inquired with some curiosity into the mode of dressing adopted by Japanese girls. It would seem that they wear nothing under their dress except a pair of short socks, and this accounts for the flexibility of their movements.

Photos of Cats.

[Chicago Times.]

The most easily photographed animals are cats. They are easily kept quiet, and their eyes are not so restless as those of a dog. When their attention is concentrated their gaze is more direct and absolutely motionless than that of a human being. A fixed eye, not a glassy stare, is the thing to be attained in a photograph.

[Medical Journal.]

Bread made with sea water is recommended by a German physician as a wonderful remedy against scrofula and disorders resulting from insufficient nourishment.

THE LADIES' MAN.

The Ingredients Which Go to Make Up His Composition—His Uses.

[Brooklyn Eagle.]

The ingredients which go to the composition of the ladies' man are—a good face, white teeth, a nose that has neither sneers nor snuff about, a very moderate share of sense and an immoderate share of nonsense, mixed according to the Gratiano receipe (that is, in the proportion of two grains of wheat to two bushels of chaff); a voice that sounds agreeably musical in "How d'ye-do?" in the ante-room, in a quartette or conversation in any room, or in a "good-night" at the extremity of the hall stairs; a back which can bend like a willow, a smirk that does not displace the hostess' confidential maid, hands white, long fingered and acorn nailed, if convenient, legs with some probability of calf, as much superior to the Apollo Belvidere as possible, two eyes of one color, whiskers and hair of his own growth, with washes, essences, lavender soaps, tooth picks and powders, tight waist, tighter pantaloons, etc.

He is of an agreeable temper, lightly pleased, and not lightly displeased. He is as cheerful to-day as he was yesterday; his boots and his wit were equally brilliant yesterday and to-day. Being independent as to property, he may be considered as a kind of toad-eater—a toad-eater without the venom of one of these reptiles. If his host is disposed to be profoundly axiomatical and says that mock turtle is not real turtle, he does not dispute it, but swallows his host's mock turtle and his real opinion at the same time. His hostess asserts that Chaucer did not write "Comus," and he confesses that his hostess' assertion has staggered an opinion he had held to the contrary. If his host is witty, he always laughs in tune and in tune. His laugh is loud, long and peculiar.

His other ones are, to hand young ladies to carriages; to hand old ladies to their seats on reception evenings; to quadrille with young ones; to wait on lovely Miss So and so between the dances and serve lemonades, ices and jellies, with a page's precision and a prince's politeness of back and body; to say handsome things to the beautiful ones; to shop with them at the jeweler's and admire their taste when they prefer French filigree to American reality and sterlingness; at the opera to cry bravo for weak voiced elderly friends, when a favorite tenor sings; and clap no louder than the same, when fairy-footed Ancona dances. These are his principal amusements, and, all together, they make up a very harmless sort of nice being, which one can no more object to than one can to honey and bread for breakfast, honey and biscuit for luncheon, honey and Vienna rolls for dinner.

Venezuela.

[Exchange.]

The word Venezuela means Little Venice. The explorers of old, like tourists of modern times, were given to tracing resemblances in America to what they were familiar with in Europe, and they imagined that the huts of Maracaibo, rising on piles above the water, looked like the city of canals and gondolas.

Helen Wilmans Man must be rescued from the reign of his animal nature by the strength of his will. As long as he merely drifts his drifting is downwards. Every step upwards towards the spirituality of a diviner life is by personal conquest.

A late invention is an ankle corset designed as a brace while roller skating.

—Few animals in times past have been more esteemed than the cat, or been honored with a wider folk lore. Indeed, among the Egyptians this favored animal was held sacred to Isis and the moon, and worshiped with great ceremony. In the mythology of all the Indo-European nations the cat holds a prominent place; and its connection with witches is well known.

From its wonderful power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now celebrated remedy to the public, Dr. PIERCE thought seriously of calling it his "Consumption Cure," but abandoned that name as too limited for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for consumption of the lungs, but for all
